The Berry Season is with us once again. Our customers will remember the Excellent Quality and Very Low Prices we gave last year. The season promises only a fair crop, but we have contracted for the whole output of one of the finest berry-growers in the Kootenays, and shall be in a position to give you the BEST VALUES. Last year our price per crate of 24 boxes of Strawberries was $3.25, and we only filled half our orders. Therefore, we advise you to book your order in advance for Strawberries, Raspberries and Blackberries.

Calgary Exhibition

The small army of men now engaged at the Calgary Industrial exhibition grounds will have everything in readiness for the official opening of the exhibition on July 1st. The exhibition will be officially opened at 3 p.m. by the Hon. Frank Oliver, Minister of the Interior, Ottawa. Following the opening the most entertaining programme ever presented will commence. The following judges have been appointed for the live stock:

Mr. R. E. Brennan, Percheron, Suffolk Punch and Belgians.
Dr. J. H. Reid, Gualph, Ont.
Clydes, Shires and Heavy Draft.
Mr. T. B. Jenkinson, Seven Percons, Saddle Horses.
Mr. S. Shannon, Clydesdale, B. C.
Dairy cattle and sheep.
Professor Cunningham, Truro, N. S., beef cattle and swine.

The judging will commence at 10 a. m. July 1st except for Clydes and Shires, the judging of which will not commence until Monday, July 3rd on account of the inability of Dr. Reid, to arrive before that.

Although the entry list last year showed such a tremendous increase over the previous year, the exhibition is again able to show a very satisfactory increase in the number of departments.

CANADIAN NORTHERN

Railway Company Are Coming This Way—Make Big Purchase of Property at Macleod.

ANOTHER RAILROAD IS NEEDED

To Hasten More Extensive Developments of Our Vast Coal Properties

For some time past the towns of South-Western Alberta have urged very strongly the construction of another railroad through this section of the country. The Prairie & Pass Promotion League, the Boards of trade, town and village councils, business men and private individuals have long been trying to impress upon the minds of the proper authorities how badly this fast growing district needed another railroad, and at many times those advocates received but scant, if any, encouragement. But, at last, it seems that their efforts have not been unavailing.

Last week the Canadian Northern Railway Company purchased property at Macleod to the value of a quarter million dollars. This, in itself, is a very significant factor and, is, undoubtedly, plain, even to the most indifferent observer, that the Canadian Northern Railway company have considerable of their attention directed towards Macleod, and that ere long their trains will be running into that town.

With the Canadian Northern Railway operating at Macleod it will then mean only the matter of a few months before that great iron horse will be running into The Pass and assisting the C. P. R.—one of the greatest wonders of the world—in bearing to the markets of commerce the coal, coke, lumber, cement, lime, brick and other products of this rich district. It is an undisputed fact that right here in The Pass—with Coleman or Carbonade on the west and with Barons or Lundbreck on the east—we have one of the richest coal districts on the North-American continent, and what we stand mostly in need of to assist in more extensively developing our vast and valuable coal properties is another railroad. And that better day is dawning.

The following is taken from press despatch which was sent out from Macleod early this week: "Mr. McNellie filed a telegram from M. H. Macleod, general manager, giving assurance that the chief divisional point of the C. N. R. in Southern Alberta will be established here if the town will approve of the suggested plans.

"It was further stated that it is the intention of the company to proceed with the construction of the road due south from Macleod for a distance of from 10 to 16 miles, then swing westward through the Water-ton and Kootenay river dis-

T. Frayer Will Give Prize

A special shoot of the Blairmore Gun Club was held at 7 o'clock on Wednesday afternoon, to decide the standing of the members and to place them in their proper classes.
Mr. T. Frayer, who presented a handsome and expensive cup to Crow's Nest Pass Hockey league last winter and who has done more to encourage good clean sport than any other person in The Pass, has already decided to present to the winner of the club a suitable shield or cup and also a button for the winner to wear.

The names of those who took part in the shooting, together with their score and class, are given below.
Class "A"
J. S. Murray 21
R. McGowan 14
J. M. Windsor 12
T. B. George 8
Class "B"
Sergeant Bowers 12
W. Wetmore 9
J. D. S. Barrett 8
W. F. Miller 5
Alex. Moroney 4
R. M. Brisco

A committee composed of J. M. Windsor, J. S. Murray and W. J. Barrett, was appointed to draft rules, scale, etc., governing the season's shoot. Committee will meet at Frank on Monday night next.

Good Operas Coming

W. A. Beebe has already received applications from several of the leading opera companies to play in the new opera house at Blairmore. The latest high-class companies to make application are the Juvenile Bostonians, Dixie Jubilee Singers, and the Castle Entertainers. These will be here in the fall. The first one will come as soon as the opera season opens. They all consider Blairmore as one of the best places along the line for up-to-date opera companies and they are delighted to learn that Blairmore will, in the course of another week or so, have one of the best opera houses in Southern Alberta and, in fact, just as good as any in this province with the exception of those at Calgary, Edmonton and the Hat.

Lame shoulder is almost invariably caused by rheumatism of the muscles and yields quickly to the free application of Chamberlain's Liniment. This liniment is not only prompt and effective, but in no way disagreeable to use. Sold by dealers everywhere.

Sergeant Tucker, of the R. N. W. M. P., shot himself through the arm on Monday morning because his sweetheart refused to see him. At the time of the shooting Tucker was supposed to be keeping guard over Fluke, under sentence of death.

Victory to Pincher Creek and the Pass.
"No time was set when the work would be constructed but it was unofficially stated that it was unofficially stated that the work would be here by this time next year.

"The plans and propositions were unanimously approved by the council and the C. N. R. will be given the new reservation on condition that the agreement is carried out.
"It was further stated on practically good authority that all the repair shops of the C. N. R. for Southern Alberta will be located at Macleod and that a union station will accommodate both the C. N. R. and the G. T. P."

BUILDING ACTIVITIES

Continue Good Around Blairmore—D. C. Drain Is Having His Hotel Enlarged and

PUT IN FIRST-CLASS CONDITION.

Blairmore Hotel Will Be One of the Best in the Crows Nest Pass

Amongst the latest building activities at Blairmore, we notice that D. C. Drain is having his hotel greatly enlarged and that he intends to make that popular hostelry one of the finest and best in the Crows Nest Pass.
An addition will be put on the north end of the Blairmore, hotel. Its size will be 50 x 55, it will have two stories, and a full size basement. By this addition, Mr. Drain will be able to put twenty more bedrooms on the second floor. The dining room and the office will be greatly enlarged. Two large sample rooms will be given place in the new addition and big and advanced improvements will be made all through the hotel. The entire building will have hot and cold water, will be steam heated throughout and have every modern convenience. T. Kennedy is doing the work and expects to have it completed by the early part of August.

This, we are sure, will be read with a great amount of satisfaction by the many Blairmoreites as well as by commercial travellers and others who have long hoped to see in Blairmore such a first-class hotel as Mr. Drain is now transforming his hostelry into.

Poor Sports at Pincher

Coronation day was spent by some shooting, while more went fishing and others went to different places along the "Crow" to witness the celebrations. A few went to Pincher Creek and returned home entirely disgusted with the way the judges handled the races, showing preference to all local horses and refusing to award prizes to Chappell's horse of Bellevue and horses from other points by which several prizes were squarely and fairly won.

R. L. Forden at Macleod

R. L. Borden, leader of the Conservative party in Canada, delivered an eloquent and convincing address on reciprocity and other public questions of interest to western Canadians, before a large body of people, at Macleod, on Thursday afternoon. Last. Several people went from The Pass to hear the honorable gentleman and they all returned fully satisfied with the masterful way in which the great Conservative chieftain handled one of the greatest and most talked-of subjects of today. It was indeed a great pity that Mr. Borden could not spare the time to visit here and to give an address in one of the towns in The Pass.

A GRIM SPECTRE.

Disease is the Dread That Haunts Steamboat Captains.

Captain Mendus of R.M.S. Dominion realized more than anyone the other day that the activities of an emigrant liner's commander, as no end with the safe piloting of his ship through uncharted and perilous waters.

There are three things the commander of a passenger liner has to worry about—fog, fire and disease. The former can be dealt with by slowing down and a frequent use of the ship's horn, and other precautions to minimize the risk of accident through the demon fog, and on the road of the sea is so relentlessly met with as making the Gulf, the Straits of Belle Isle and even in the Gulf itself.

Fier is a devastating terrifying agent, but with a good head of steam pumps and hose in good working order and the well drilled ship's fire brigade made compulsory on all passenger carrying liners nowadays a fire at sea is easily dealt with as it is in reads in cold and sensational print, and has taken place and been so effectively dealt with that it is almost as if the passengers have been in ignorance of its presence.

There is one thing every commander of a vessel, large or small, hopes and inwardly prays will never be his lot as a steamship captain, and that is a grim spectre disease, and when its presence appears in so malignant and hideous a form as the following by Bob Lowery, one of the best-known newspaper men in Western Canada.

An Editor's Irony.
Time and time again editors have taken a fling at the people who seem to be so much in the wrong that it is through no fault of Captain Mendus, or any relaxation of the company's stringent hygiene regulations, that the serious and irksome detention has been caused, detention, which however, is vitally necessary to the safeguarding of Canada's health from an epidemic of this dread scourge.

FADING AT THIRTY

When Woman Should be in the Prime of Charm and Beauty

At thirty to thirty-five a woman should be in the prime of charm and beauty, and yet many women begin to fade before then. Wrinkles appear and the complexion grows sallow. Dark rings surround the eyes, and headaches follow, with backaches and sour spirits. The cause of this is the need of blood nourishment. Good, pure blood is the life of a woman's beauty and health. It is good blood that brings the glow of health to the cheek, brightness to the eye, and elasticity to the step, and the general happiness of good health. When women feel faded and worn out her blood simply needs attention, and the one unrivaled and sure remedy is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which supply the rich, red blood that repairs the waste, dispels disease and restores the brightness and charm of womanly life.

Mrs. H. G. Hart, Winnipeg, Man., is one of the thousands of sufferers who owes her present health to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. She says: "I had suffered for a long time, not knowing what the trouble was, I had doctor with several doctors, but only seemed to be growing worse. The last doctor I had told me the trouble was anæmia, that my blood was turned to water, and that my condition was serious. But his treatment, like the rest, did me no good. I had had that if I existed myself or went up stairs, I was completely out of breath and felt as if I was going to suffocate. My heart would palpitate violently, and at times I would suffer with terrible pains from it. I had a yellow complexion, my lips had lost their color, and I had no appetite and could not eat. I grew so weak I could hardly get myself along, and my feet seemed to have weights on them. It was so complete that I lay down that I thought I was going into consumption. At this time a friend urged me to take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. After taking a few boxes I found my health improving, and after taking the Pills for four or five months I was entirely well, and have since enjoyed the best of health, and I am a very healthy woman."

These Pills are sold by all dealers in medicine or sent by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

FARMER'S WIFE TELLS HER STORY

FOUND A CURE FOR ALL HER ILLS IN DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS

She was tired, worn-out and nervous and suffered from Rheumatism, but two boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills cured her.

Hawthorne, Ont. (Special)—Mrs. T. G. Alexander, wife of a well-known farmer living near here, adds her testimony to that of the thousands who have learned from their own experience that Dodd's Kidney Pills cure Kidney Disease.

I suffered for twelve years," Mrs. Alexander says, "My back ached, my sleep was broken and unrefreshing. I was nervous and tired and I was troubled with heart fluttering. Rheumatism developed and added to my suffering."

I was in a very run-down, worn-out condition when I started to use Dodd's Kidney Pills, but I am thankful to say they gave me relief almost from the first. Two boxes cured me completely.

Dodd's Kidney Pills cure the Kidneys. Cured Kidneys mean that all impurities are strained out of the blood. That means pure blood all over the body and the banishment of that tired, heavy feeling and those pains and aches that impure blood brings.

1867-1911

Saturday, July 1st, will be the birthday of the Canadian nation. On July 1st the Dominion of Canada will enter upon its forty-fifth year. On that date we celebrate the day that made Canada out of a mere congeries of separate and often hostile localities. The day will be duly honored by every Canadian, not only in every city, town and hamlet of the Dominion, but by Canadians the world over. It is a day for rejoicing, and it is a day also for sober patriotic thought. It is the duty of every Canadian to take thought for the country's future, and to be mindful, too, of the lessons of the country's history.

Forty-four years ago on Saturday the British North American act went into force uniting under one central government the provinces of Ontario and Quebec, then known respectively as Upper and Lower Canada, and the two maritime provinces of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick.

The fathers of the Confederation were inspired by a deep loyalty to Great Britain. But they laid the foundation of a structure infinitely greater than they could imagine. Had the Confederation of Canada not taken place, British North America would have remained a number of separate and probably greatly discontented and jealous territories, under the guidance of a state on the other side of the Atlantic. Since the first Dominion day, the scattered communities with apparently nothing in common but their British connection, which in those days constituted Great Britain's colonial possessions on this continent, have been united into a sturdy young nation, self-reliant, but at the same time proud to form part of the Great British empire.

Without bloodshed, without ill-feeling, out of the most diverse elements and widely differing conditions, Canada was built into a nation, the hearts of all whose citizens, beat as one. So far as the future of Canada is concerned, this national spirit is strong enough to resist all attacks upon the integrity of the country, if any such attacks were likely to be made. In the West it seems ridiculous to say this, but it has to be said on behalf of the West to those feeble-minded people who are always imagining that some mysterious agency is going to strip the West from Canada or the whole of Canada from the British empire.

The whole Dominion has made wonderful progress in the development of its resources, in the building up of industries, and the creation of wealth and prosperity which is widely diffused throughout all classes of the Canadian people. Those who, twenty or thirty years ago, could see no great future ahead of Western Canada have had their misgivings overwhelmingly dispelled.

They could not foresee the triumphs of courage and enterprise, which have so splendidly refuted their pessimistic reflections, nor imagine the transformation of the desolation upon which their thoughts dwelt into a land of unprecedented abundance and prosperity. Let us be thankful that we are living in the midst of the most sanguine expectations of the men who laid the foundations of the Dominion. Let us be proud that we are part of the greatest empire on earth and let us celebrate the 1st of July with an enthusiasm in which national feeling and Imperial sentiment are harmoniously blended.

Editorial Notes

Canada—the brightest national gem in the British crown.

With the settlement of the coal miners' strike, The Pass will go ahead with leaps and bounds.

The heavy rains of the past week have caused a smile on the farmers' countenances that won't very easily come off.

One day last week while we were passing along the main street at Coleman, a number of men were wondering as to who would resume the publication of the Coleman Miner, and when a Slav, member of the defunct Slav Miners' union, mentioned a name which sounded like "Brandon," the crowd laughed loud and long.

We often hear complimentary remarks regarding this paper, but the many nice things that have reached our ears in reference to our last week's editorial on "The Strike Situation," which appeared on the front page, have indeed been numerous. This is another proof that Socialism, more properly termed "Anarchism," is waning in this district and that the miners do not approve of the tactics played by some of their Socialist friends.

The name of "Brandon" recalls to many minds and unpleasant memories of the past. There is a Brandon in Manitoba which is noted for its lunatic asylum, and there is also a Brandon in some town near the International boundary line, regarding whose notoriety we would advise you, gentle reader, to ask the Coleman people.

Coleman Notes

The Coleman Miner was sold by deputy sheriff, J. W. Gresham, on Saturday morning last. T. B. Brandon was not there but his ghost was in evidence.

A splendid celebration was held here on Coronation day. About noon over two hundred boys and girls and several hundred grown-up persons met near the school grounds where the hopefuls were presented by C. P. Willmott with beautiful coronation medals made of aluminum and nicely stamped on both sides. After this was done, councillor Clark, who so well succeeded in placing the children in line and forming a long procession, led the crowd to Flummerfelt Park where Mayor Cameron delivered an able address and one that was well suited for the occasion. The afternoon was pleasantly spent in listening to the band, watching the football matches, etc. In the evening a concert was given in the Opera house. This was followed by a dance. The day was thoroughly enjoyed by all present, and Coleman is to be congratulated on being the only town in The Pass that held a coronation celebration. Thanks to the interest taken in the children and town by Mayor Cameron.

A Pleasant Event

A very pleasant evening was spent at the Rocky Mountain Sanatorium on Monday evening last when Miss E. Olson entertained a number of her young friends to a birthday party. After the hostess had met about a dozen of her guests in the parlor and after she had received the hearty congratulations and best wishes of them all, the happy pairs betook themselves to the dining room where a dinner of a very elaborate nature was partaken of and thoroughly enjoyed. The following toasts were then made:

"The King and Queen"—proposed by Rev. W. T. Young, responded to by C. Deila.

"The Ladies"—proposed by R. W. Thompson, responded to by A. J. Hollmott.

"Our Mothers"—proposed by W. J. Bartlett, responded to by J. C. Bondrea.

"Our Town"—proposed by C. Deila, responded to by J. D. S. Barrett.

"Our Country"—proposed by J. C. Bondrea, responded to by Rev. W. T. Young.

"The Press"—proposed by J. D. S. Barrett, responded to by W. J. Bartlett.

Miss Olson was presented with a gold watch and fob, Miss Sunstrom making the presentation, while J. D. S. Barrett, who proposed the toast to "Our Hostess," read the following address which was responded to by A. J. Hollmott:

DEAR MISS OLSON,—Birthdays may be called the milestones in life's journey, and as you reach another of these anniversary landmarks today, permit us your surrounding circle of friends, to congratulate you on having travelled thus far in safety and to wish you with all our hearts, many similar opportunities of receiving your friends' love and hope every year of your future life will find you still happier than the last. That the years will glide happily away without care or sorrow. May your roof of happiness be lighted by Goodness. May your lamp of friendship ever be supplied by the oil of truth and fidelity. May you never have false friends who, like shadows, keep close to you to the sunshine only to desert you on cloudy days. May you be lavished with the good things of the world. And when the furrows of care and grey gather about your temples, when length of years make thee tired of earthly joys and when the curtains of death, gently close around the last scene of thy existence, may the angels of God attend thy bed and take care that the expiring lamp of life shall not receive one rude blast to hasten its extinction, and finally may the Savior's blood wash thee free from all impurities and at last direct thee into the land of everlasting felicity.

While we heartily congratulate you upon having successfully reached an other milestone along the pleasant journey of life, it is with real sorrow that we learn of your near departure from Frank and The Pass. During your short stay in this town we have known you as a lady of amiable habits and of refined culture, possessing many graces of mind and person, and it is with sincere and unalloyed regret that we so heartily desire to express to you in words that can hardly portray our thoughts, the kind and courteous manner in which you have acted towards all with whom you have come in contact. You need no eulogy, you speak for yourself.

We wish you long life and happiness for you much happiness. We hope that are long the attractions of this town will lure you back and that you will return for a long stay amongst us to again cast your cheering influence for good in this community.

We ask you to accept this token as a small mark of our esteem and unswerving friendship. May it always convey to you sweet remembrances of the past, and when your own star shall sit as life's close may it not go down upon the darkening West, but may it melt away into that haven of light where parting is never known and where you may spend your never-ending year in love and harmony.

The pleasant party repaired to the parlor about 10 p.m. where an enjoyable time was spent until Father Time moved the long hand of the clock to the hour of twelve, when all left for their respective homes.

A career of great distinction was ended at Winnipeg on Saturday morning last when the death occurred of Hon. T. Mayne Daly, P. C., K. C., police magistrate and judge of the juvenile court of Winnipeg and former minister of the interior.

An Easy Case

The Plan That We Devoted to Catch a Crook

By JOHN D. JONES

Copyright by American Press Association

When I went into the detective business in Albany, N. Y., I took service with a firm that was managed by a very experienced man. He had the reputation of having covered many crooks than any detective living. I was anxious to show him what I could do and soon found an admirable opportunity.

There had been a bank robbery, and $10,000 in bills had been taken from the bank. A few days later on, reporting at the office, my chief said to me: "We're on the track of the man who robbed the Albany National and I wish you to nab him. We're watching the trains leaving the city every day since the robbery was committed for any suspicious person trying to get away. The consequence is that our quarry hasn't dared to try it. But he's been given away. If these men were only the women they take up with decency we would not catch so many of them. I have a letter, evidently written by a woman, stating that Andy Sims, alias Charles Jenkins, alias Trusty Joe, is the man who robbed the bank and that he has planned to leave the city by the 10 o'clock train tomorrow morning for New York. He will be accompanied by his mother. He has assumed possession under a fictitious name of the Northumbria for Southampton. The money he took from the bank was hidden in a trunk and box. Take Horton with you and look out for an old woman and a young man. Of course he'll be disguised."

Horton and I left before the train before it left the station, keeping a sharp eye on every one who got aboard. A few minutes before leaving time a woman whom my practiced eye told me had "made up" came toward the cars, but she had a get on board looking back anxiously as if expecting some one. Presently a well dressed young man came hurrying in to the station, passed by the woman, went to a forward berth and jumped aboard. Although not a glance passed between him and the woman, the moment she saw him she went into the coach and took a seat.

I ran forward to where Horton was watching, described the young man referred to and told him to keep a sharp eye on him.

"Everything is working well," I said, "but keep your eyes on him and don't make a mistake until you have good reason to do so. If you nab the wrong man the right one may get away while your attention is taken up on a false scent."

While I was giving these instructions the train moved out. Horton stopped aboard, and as soon as my car reached me I did the same. The woman was sitting apparently unconcerned, but she couldn't conceal from me the fact that she was striving with a hidden emotion. Her bosom was heaving and her eye was restless. She kept rearranging her belongings on the seat, and I was quite sure she was doing so in order to help her to retain her composure. One thing that especially gave her away was her constant opening a hand bag, taking out a bottle of smelling salts and using it.

I had no doubt the young man was our quarry, but I didn't propose to lose sight of the woman, thinking that she might have some of the swag on her person. But since the most important part of the matter seemed to lie in the man in front I went forward, took Horton's place and told him to go back and take him. The chief was scheduled to stop but out between Albany and New York, and that was at Poughkeepsie. Since we were moving at the rate of fifty miles an hour, we had no chance for any one to get off until we reached that station.

I asked myself what the young man I was to watch, and taking a photograph of Andy Sims, obtained from the rogues' gallery, from my pocket, compared it with the suspect's face. The moment I did so I was sure he was on the right track. His features were more delicate than those of the photograph, but the coloring of his skin in rough features, while the suspect was very well dressed. This would have a tendency to make an apparent more refined.

The chief had advised that as we were at Poughkeepsie, the first station west of the city, we should keep a sharp eye on the man who had been taken from the bank. We had been told that he would do so because I had learned from the conductor that he had taken tickets to New York. Before we reached Poughkeepsie my suspect had thrown down a newspaper he had been reading and dropped asleep, real or pretended. He didn't awake while we did so at once without my firing a shot and succeeded very tamely. I clapped the handcuffs on him and waited for the train to start.

While going so I ordered him to take off his boots, expecting to find the bills in them, as he had been advised by the woman who had given him away. I was disappointed in finding nothing. I noticed that he had a very small foot. There were some very small bills in his pocket, but I didn't get the wrong man. But he seemed to have expected my arrest, and the circumstances of the case were so overwhelmingly in favor of the theory that he was the man I wanted that I gave the matter little thought. I was led to believe that the woman who had taken Horton's care had the loot, and my anxiety was all in that direction.

I took my man to Albany and gave the chief an account of the circumstances of the capture as far as I knew them. Nothing had been heard from Horton. The chief ordered me to keep a sharp eye on our captive. He was handed over to a couple of the force for the purpose and taken into a private room. There he was ordered to come out with a broad grin on his face.

"We don't care to go any further in that matter," the chief said. "I want that young fellow searched you'd better call in a woman." "Why?" I asked, astonished. "Because he's a woman himself," the chief laughed. "The chief looked at me thunderstruck, then with an expression of incredulity ordered that he be held till Horton should be heard from, after which, if Horton had no success, she should be discharged. "But you won't," I said, a good deal flattered; "this thing is a game. The woman Horton is watching has got the money. This one," replied the chief sternly, "has turned out to be a woman. I'll bet the other turns out to be a man."

As he spoke a telegram was handed in. It proved to be from Horton and simply said that he was waiting for the next train back. "That was the longest wait I ever had in my life. When he came in his composure was unshaken, was of course to be expected—failure."

He told us that when the train stopped at Poughkeepsie the woman who was waiting went into the coach and looked the door. If Horton waited in the car for her to unlock the door she unlocked it and he slipped through the car window. If he went out on the platform to wait from the outside she might unlock the door and he might be caught by the car by the ordinary passenger. While he was trying to make up his mind what to do, he saw the woman in the coach, and saw on the platform, the coach, but saw no woman. As soon as he could get a man to do the work the woman who had turned the window was open and some of my car's clothes were on the floor. Sims was subsequently captured and a considerable part of the loot was found. He said his sister had planned the whole thing for him. She had written the letter giving the information respecting his departure and the train by which he would leave. He had dressed himself as a woman, not taking notice to conceal the fact that he was wearing a wig on him was a disappointment. Nothing Horton's eyes fixed on him, he realized that he was under observation, and, the "game" occupying through the saloon had occurred to him. His woman's dress had been put on over his man's clothes, but one must always keep learning and never get perfectly taught. I made up my mind after my first experience that I would wait before making an arrest of a suspicious person. But my very next case taught me that there is danger in acting too quickly, just as there is in acting too slowly. I pointed upon a man, thinking he was my quarry, and while he was looking at me he slipped out a handkerchief and slipped out through a door. Since these two cases I have learned to do my best, and when I make a failure I put it down to lack of experience.

NEXT DOOR'S FRUIT TREE.

The One Whose Branches Extend Over the Fence Into Your Yard.

The next door fruit tree, growing so near the line that ladies sometimes tend over the fence, has proved a source of untold speakings to the neighbors, quarrels between otherwise good neighbors and even wars between police courts. It is inclined to suspect that the original apple tree of trouble hung over a neighbor's fence. The cause of friction is, of course, the question of the ownership of or at least the right to take and use the fruit on the two widely spread branches. Generally this fruit is claimed by the person whose property is thus invaded, but if he asserts this claim to the point of gathering the fruit without permission he may feel the iron hand of the law, says Harper's Weekly. If he objects to the presence of the branches which extend over his property the owner of the tree must remove them. But if the owner of the tree applies for the fruit to the permission to take and use the owner of the land over which the branches extend cannot refuse permission for entry for this purpose. The right of entry to land over which the tree or to allow the owner of the tree to enter and take it, then the owner of the fruit must enter without permission, but he must use no force and cannot any damage in so entering.

Certainly the most neighborly thing to do would be to divide that fruit.

The history of successive violations of the great maxim of the law, "Thou shalt not steal," is a long one. It is a disturbance of the physical good presents points of some interest. So late as the first century of the last century there were those who traced the wretchedness of the planetary vices to the fact that the law was in coincidence with such calamities.

The recurrent waves of pestilence which swept across the world, before and during the middle ages, leaving death in its wake, were heralded by the appearance of unusual disturbances of the globe. Rome fell a prey to its ravages with appalling consequences following the looting of the city of the world.

The first great plague occurred in 366 B.C., when the plague broke out with devastating effect in Athens, Greece. More than ten thousand died in a day at the height; the living were scarcely able to bury the dead. Disturbing omens had been observed; dimly filled the populace; the streets were filled with the dead in the stricken city new games were instituted and a publicly given ordinance was issued to the effect that the gods, Hercules, Mercury and Neptune were placed on three couches and served with wine and food for a space of eight days. But, as the event, revolted all was of no avail; the dead still obstructed the streets and the plague was an offense in the nostrils. They might as well have appointed a cook's hall. At last some of the most famous Romans recalled a pious custom dating from the time of the founding of the city; a nail was driven into Jupiter's temple during the day of September.

The next year Rome was rent by an earthquake of great violence; a fire occurred in the midst of the city. The gods, it was thought, were angry, and desired a living sacrifice. Accordingly, a young man of noble birth and named Plautius, was sacrificed to posterity, buried himself in the flames. The plague was not stopped, but the Romans prospered to the Roman world. Writers recalled after the plague had passed that the gods were angry, and a terrible tidal wave which inundated the city of Rome and the city of the world. Again, in 128 B.C., the pestilence fell upon Rome. A bacchanal party had been given in the city, and the gods were angry. The pestilence was not stopped, but the Romans prospered to the Roman world. Writers recalled after the plague had passed that the gods were angry, and a terrible tidal wave which inundated the city of Rome and the city of the world.

The first index to an English book is said to be the index in Polybius's "Anglice Historiae" in 1546. An edition of this work published two years later has an index of thirty-seven pages.

Stories of Wellington and Blucher. I once met Wellington at dinner. He was then much older, talked more and with great distinctness, ate but little, drank no wine and left early. He was a member of the Union club in London, and I have heard a story that he became a member of Crookford's, the famous gambling resort, that he might blackmail his friends if they became candidates.

I remember the touching anecdote of how he and that old Russian warlord, Blucher, met on the field of Waterloo and mingled their tears. "The bodies of the slain," the well known and much more probable story told of Blucher's army, having been entertained at a city dinner, were thoroughly enjoying its gorgeous hospitality, he delighted his guests by his table talk. I remember a Londoner, however, with the startling exclamation, "What a splendid city it would be to such!" From Sergeant Hain's Experiences.

"Don't Think." Many correspondents have traced "I don't think" through many writers and speakers. But this writer, who has the habit of reading the title in two languages at night, suddenly came upon the seventeenth chapter of Luke and the parable of the servant who merely did his duty: "I don't think that servant because he did the things that were commanded him; I throw not." Now, the Greek words are simply these in modern characters, "On doko," which mean just "I don't think." Anyhow we cannot get better authority for the use of the expression which Christ employed in the course of his teaching than the words of Luke as he walked and talked—London Chronicle.

Teleology's Thoughts on Death. The fear of death is natural. The fear of death is the consciousness of the fear of death.

The fear of death emanates from the fact that people regard as life only a small part of it. Limited by their own erroneous conception.

FORERUNNERS OF DOOM.

COMING EVENTS CAST THEIR SHADOWS BEFORE THEM.

Extraordinary Disturbances of the Globe and Vagrant Signs Which Seem to Herald and Accompany Waves of Pestilence Have Always Been a Matter of Interest to Philosophers—Black Death Foretold.

A great mystery which stretches far back into the misty archives of the past first recorded in the scriptural accounts of the plagues which came out of Egypt, is arresting the flow of light of history inquiry to the far east where Death and all his horrors stalk through the land. "Last before them," has been duly expounded through all the ages by the valiant consequences following the looting of nature's wrath or the foretelling of doom by our mythological guardian, said sailing through heaven's blue dome.

The history of successive violations of the great maxim of the law, "Thou shalt not steal," is a long one. It is a disturbance of the physical good presents points of some interest. So late as the first century of the last century there were those who traced the wretchedness of the planetary vices to the fact that the law was in coincidence with such calamities.

The recurrent waves of pestilence which swept across the world, before and during the middle ages, leaving death in its wake, were heralded by the appearance of unusual disturbances of the globe. Rome fell a prey to its ravages with appalling consequences following the looting of the city of the world.

The first great plague occurred in 366 B.C., when the plague broke out with devastating effect in Athens, Greece. More than ten thousand died in a day at the height; the living were scarcely able to bury the dead. Disturbing omens had been observed; dimly filled the populace; the streets were filled with the dead in the stricken city new games were instituted and a publicly given ordinance was issued to the effect that the gods, Hercules, Mercury and Neptune were placed on three couches and served with wine and food for a space of eight days. But, as the event, revolted all was of no avail; the dead still obstructed the streets and the plague was an offense in the nostrils. They might as well have appointed a cook's hall. At last some of the most famous Romans recalled a pious custom dating from the time of the founding of the city; a nail was driven into Jupiter's temple during the day of September.

The next year Rome was rent by an earthquake of great violence; a fire occurred in the midst of the city. The gods, it was thought, were angry, and desired a living sacrifice. Accordingly, a young man of noble birth and named Plautius, was sacrificed to posterity, buried himself in the flames. The plague was not stopped, but the Romans prospered to the Roman world. Writers recalled after the plague had passed that the gods were angry, and a terrible tidal wave which inundated the city of Rome and the city of the world.

Again, in 128 B.C., the pestilence fell upon Rome. A bacchanal party had been given in the city, and the gods were angry. The pestilence was not stopped, but the Romans prospered to the Roman world. Writers recalled after the plague had passed that the gods were angry, and a terrible tidal wave which inundated the city of Rome and the city of the world.

The first index to an English book is said to be the index in Polybius's "Anglice Historiae" in 1546. An edition of this work published two years later has an index of thirty-seven pages.

Stories of Wellington and Blucher. I once met Wellington at dinner. He was then much older, talked more and with great distinctness, ate but little, drank no wine and left early. He was a member of the Union club in London, and I have heard a story that he became a member of Crookford's, the famous gambling resort, that he might blackmail his friends if they became candidates.

I remember the touching anecdote of how he and that old Russian warlord, Blucher, met on the field of Waterloo and mingled their tears. "The bodies of the slain," the well known and much more probable story told of Blucher's army, having been entertained at a city dinner, were thoroughly enjoying its gorgeous hospitality, he delighted his guests by his table talk. I remember a Londoner, however, with the startling exclamation, "What a splendid city it would be to such!" From Sergeant Hain's Experiences.

"Don't Think." Many correspondents have traced "I don't think" through many writers and speakers. But this writer, who has the habit of reading the title in two languages at night, suddenly came upon the seventeenth chapter of Luke and the parable of the servant who merely did his duty: "I don't think that servant because he did the things that were commanded him; I throw not." Now, the Greek words are simply these in modern characters, "On doko," which mean just "I don't think." Anyhow we cannot get better authority for the use of the expression which Christ employed in the course of his teaching than the words of Luke as he walked and talked—London Chronicle.

Teleology's Thoughts on Death. The fear of death is natural. The fear of death is the consciousness of the fear of death.

The fear of death emanates from the fact that people regard as life only a small part of it. Limited by their own erroneous conception.

Just as the owner of the fig tree knows the time when the fruit is ripe so God knows when to call the ringer to this world.

SADDEST ROOM IN LONDON.

Where Bereaved People Gather at "No. 44."

The saddest room in London—No. 44, in Tottenham Court Road, is a well-known room, where Mr. James Russell retired.

No. 44 is a room in the Willis & Tabor Department of Somerset House—the room set apart for personal applications, where no lawyer or "perch" acting as adviser is allowed to enter.

All day long in No. 44 a group of sad people, widows and widowers and bereaved sons and daughters, sit patiently around an oblong table endeavoring with Mr. Russell's kindly aid and advice, to fill up the long schedules which show in detail their "little all."

Correspondence with Mr. Russell's office is not allowed. The personal note is the feature of the office, and business can only be transacted with the applicant in person.

One day recently seven recently-bereaved widows were sitting around the table in the office endeavoring with Mr. Russell's kindly aid and advice, to fill up the long schedules which show in detail their "little all."

Cookery Points

Giving a Luncheon.

An important point to remember always in entertaining is that it is not nearly so important to serve many courses or much in each course as to serve everything very prettily and take suitable pains in the garnishing of the different dishes and the way that they are passed and served.

Here is a suitable menu: Grapefruit cut in halves, the fruit scooped out carefully, the tough membrane and seeds removed and the fruit flavored with lemon juice and powdered sugar, and a little marmalade, if you wish, and put back into the halves with a few crushed cherries, the part of schoolmaster with the gentle friendly air of the old family solicitor.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Gardner, of Elk River, drove in from Michel on Saturday and registered at the Frank hotel. Mr. Gardner has large interests in several iron and other valuable ore claims in this district and left on Sunday to inspect some property at the North Fork.

R. H. Bohart, T. H. Bohart and Miss Bohart, of Warden, came to town on Sunday and registered at the Rocky Mountain Sanatorium. R. H. Bohart returned home on Monday while Miss Bohart remained here to take care of her brother who is receiving treatment for rheumatism.

J. Whiller has secured the contract for the building of an office and two dwelling houses for the Hillcrest Coal & Coke Co., of Hillcrest and commenced work on the excavation for the said buildings on Tuesday. One of the dwelling houses which Mr. Whiller is erecting will be occupied by Mr. Brown, the manager of the coal company.

H. H. Banks has resigned his position as master mechanic with the Canadian Coal Consolidated plant here and leaves on Monday to take a similar position with the Royal Collieries, at Lethbridge.

W. I. Huston, who has been principle of the public school here for over four years, has resigned from that position and will say good-bye to his many friends here next week when he will leave Frank. Mr. Huston's numerous friends in the Pass will be sorry to see him take his departure and will all join in wishing him success in his mining ventures.

CORPUS CHRISTI CHURCH BEST IN THE PASS

Due to the Untiring Efforts of the Reverend Father Lajot

It must be very gratifying to the members and adherents of the Roman Catholic church in The Pass to know that they have a priest who displays so much activity and exercises so large a degree of earnestness for their church and its doctrines as the Rev. Father Lajot has done during his ministry at Frank.

It was our good fortune and great pleasure this week to visit Corpus Christi church and, although we had previously heard that the Roman Catholics were making their house of God, which stands so prominently on the hill, one of the neatest and most handsome edifices in The Pass, the splendid sights which we beheld on entering that sacred place far exceeded our most sanguine expectations, and we are sure, would compare favorably with many of the churches in some of the large cities. This is all due to Rev. Father Lajot who never ceases to work for the interest of his church and parishioners.

On entering the Corpus Christi church, the first thing which attracted our attention was a large statue of Christ the Redeemer, which image was presented to Rev. Father Lajot during his recent visit in Belgium. The Altar is beautifully and tastefully made and is in keeping with the splendid statue erected over the same. The reverend Father has also put up on the walls four statues which some friends of his in France gave him during his visit there last winter. These statues are so placed that the people may have full view of them. They are the Virgin Mary, St. Joseph, St. Benedict and St. Anthony.

The Corpus Christi church was recently erected through the efforts of Rev. Father Lajot. It has a seating capacity of over two hundred. It is a nicely painted both inside and out. A bell will shortly arrive from Belgium. To say the least, Frank has the best church in The Pass and one of the neatest churches in the Province.

Mrs. M. Drumm gave a delightful dinner in honor of Mesdames Craig and Ball on Saturday evening. The dinner was given at the Imperial hotel and was very much enjoyed by all the ladies present. Besides the hostess and Mrs. Craig, Mrs. Ball and Miss Ball, there were present Mesdames V. H. Wetmore, Windsor, Clearhue, E. T. Fitzsimmons, H. C. Moore and Cruickshanks, Misses Berry and MacRury.

Too cream and refreshments will be served on the verandah or the inside of the Rocky Mountain Sanatorium every Sunday and Wednesday.

The governor in council on Monday decided that the law should take its course in the case of John Fiske, the Calgary murderer, and he was hanged on Tuesday.

Happenings in and Around Bellevue

On July 4th, Bellevue football players will take a visit to Coleman when they expect to win $100.00. It is hoped that Tristram will be in good form and his slight accident right for that day.

The Rev. Irwin landed in camp last week and preached his introductory sermon on Sunday last. It is hoped that he will be a success and a sportsman of the highest kind. A large crowd gathered together in the church to hear their new pastor. He anticipates a large crowd to hear him next Sunday.

On Sunday, June 11th, the Rev. T. D. Jones preached his farewell sermon. A fairly large congregation assembled to hear him. He took for his text "What shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul or what shall a man give in exchange for his life." After the sermon, he thanked all who had helped him in his church service and social life.

Some grand sports have been arranged for next Saturday. A capital programme has been carefully arranged and it is hoped there will be large crowds from the surrounding camps. About $300 in prizes will be given to the winners of the different items. A good day is anticipated and it is hoped the weather will be fine. For full information of the sports apply Fred Chappell, Hon. Secretary, Bellevue. On the following Monday a dance will be held in the Social hall when it is hoped a grand time will be spent.

On Sunday, June 18th, a meeting of the Bellevue baseball team and the football teams of the surrounding camps, was held to consider the drawing up of a league to be played for this season. The teams were represented as follows: Hillcrest, A. Crowthers; Lille, Const. Bachelor, Bellevue, F. Chappell; Passburg, Dr. Bell, Burnis and Lundbreck, T. Sloan. Const. Bachelor was in the chair and Mr. J. Brenner, of Hillcrest, was appointed league secretary. Referees were appointed and the schedule for the season was drawn up. It was agreed to call it "The Bellevue and District League" and that it should be ruled by the Crow's Nest Pass League rules. Burnis, Frank and Coleman were approached to join but could not see their way clear to do so. Bellevue team and Hillcrest played on Wednesday, June 28.
